

Accolades: Maya Oudeh
by Mohammad Khan

Maya Oudeh passed away, alone, from old age at the age of 78 in hospice care. She has no living relatives but many people speak of Maya with great admiration. Maya was bed ridden since the age of 25 from an automobile accident that claimed her mobility and her family. Anyone who knows Maya knows she loves to travel and despite her immobility, she explored the world through her mind. Maya told stories of her travels from soothsayers and magicians, people of wondrous professions and mystic abilities. Worlds of spectacular magical feats and the capabilities of ordinary people. Anyone who had the pleasure of listening to her stories received something truly special, a true gift on earth. The funeral services will be held on August 21 at 10 am at O'Neil cemetery on 1559 Foxtrot road.

Accolades: Hank Abernathy
by Mohammad Khan

Hank Abernathy was killed by a stray bullet during a robbery. He died at the age of 35. He is survived by his two brothers and aging parents. A longtime member of the Chemical Engineer Society. He was an icon in the field for his creative solutions and diplomatic approach to disagreeable clients. He had an unbounded enthusiasm about him and if you ask anyone who was around him for a bit, they would remember his smile and the warmth it brought and the sincerity behind it. Someone you could rely on at any moment. Hank continuously provided help and support for those who needed it. He was an avid learner, often having enough books in his to start his own library. His love for learning was surpassed by his love of passing knowledge on to others. In his final moments, Hank passed on his last piece of wisdom to his family with a smile.

Accolades: Mera Morellio
by Mohammad Khan

Mera Morellio, a bright, ambitious woman who was taken from us too soon. She passed away at the age of 22 from a car accident with a drunk driver. Mera was a lover of science and exploration. She had her head looking up at the stars rather than at the ground. She majored in astrophysics but kept her passion in painting alive. Oftentimes she combined the two in glorious displays of art and her scientific work saying the sciences and art cannot be separated from each other. She was an example in her university and among her friends and family. An example that childhood exploration can continue throughout life and you would always be learning, and that way life will never be boring.

Accolades: Abigail Dawara
by Mohammad Khan

Abigail Dawara died from bone cancer at the age of 18. She was not able to receive a donation in time before the cancer claimed her life. Cancer has been a grim reaper for too long in our society so Abigail's parents have created a donation fund for cancer research called Abigail's Deed. Abigail was not the easiest person to be around. Her friends and family describe her as being a hard ass, stubborn, and blunt, but she cared. She knew how to love. She wasn't easy on people, always expecting more than they thought they could do. Abigail pushed herself despite her illness and made sure her friends and family did the same. As Abigail once said, "what other way is there to live"
